HENN, HEDGES BATTLE HEADS BOTH TICKETS

Fight For Mayor Expected To Draw Many To Polls—
Other Contests.

The contest for Circleville's mayor between Mayor B. T. Hedges, Republican and Willis L. Henn, Democrat, is expected to draw more voters to the polls Tuesday than in any general election in recent years here.

Much propaganda has been voiced for and against each candidate. Mayor Hedges is confident; so is Mr. Henn.

Another contest is that between Paul Helwagen, Democrat, present incumbent, and Simon Frank, Republican, for city treasurer.

Four are candidates for the three offices of councilman-at-large. They are: E. S. Neuding, Frank Marion, and W. F. Baker, Democrats and Mack Parrett Jr., Republican.

Circleville's school board election promises some competition where J. R. Noecker, Lawrence Goeller and Donald Watt are striving for two berths.

The Justice of the Peace fight promises action.

Where there have been two justices before only one is to be elected now and there are four candidates for that office. They include E. C. Friece, George Strawser, George R. Whitehurst and Sterling M. Lamb.

The three mill school levy is placed before the voters and from all indications it will easily pass.

Several bond issues are also listed in the county. They are: Jackson-twp. $100,000 for a new high school building; Wayne-twp. $40,000, for a new centralized school; Scioto-twp. $20,000 for a new auditorium and gymnasium.

The new tax amendment is also up this time and is creating much interest through the state.

Here are Circleville's voting places:

First ward east: The Community House of the U. B. church.

First ward north: Garage of Edward Helwagen, at 408 on the east side of N. Court-st.

First ward west: Store room of Cahries Stoffer, at 158 on the north side of W. Main-st.

Second ward east: Woebert's shop, at 313 on the west side of Clinton-st.

Second ward west: fire department building.

Third ward north: Mayor's office in the city building.

Third ward south: Office of H. M. Crites, on his mill property at 835 S. Court-st.

Fourth ward north: store room of George Limebaugh, 406 South Pickaway-st.

Fourth ward south: office of Sears-Nichols Canning company at 943 S. Washington-st.

Women To Hear Night Club Queen

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—(INS)—Texas Guinan, hostess of Broadway fame, today commented on the remarks she is preparing to give to a group of Chicago women tomorrow on "How to Keep Husbands at Home."

"I've seen them come and go," said the prospective guest of honor. "Old husbands, new husbands—all looking for something tangible—something beginning with H, like home, happiness, heaven if you will, and usually what you found at their address began with H, too."

"I am going to say plenty about the women who make 'lifers' out of their husbands and expect them to drive the warden's car besides."

ROAD MEETING SCHEDULED AT COURT HOUSE

Residents of Clarksburg-Chillicothe Road To Argue Annexation.

A meeting will be held in the Pickaway-co court house on Thursday, Nov. 7 when residents of the Clarksburg-Chillicothe road will present their arguments to have the highway made into a state road.

The Chillicothe Chamber of Commerce three years ago promoted a regional meeting at Clarksburg at which it advocated steps toward the creation of a state highway out of this much traveled road and while at the time some opposition was voiced by property owners in the vicinity of Mt. Sterling, the majority of farmers voted for the proposed highway and asked for hard-surfacing of it, or at least tar and gravel treatment and widening of bridges and culverts.

Now that state law has been changed which permits the state to build and construct such highways without assessment upon abutting property, the time has arrived when the state highway department, recognizing the value of the highway, has designated a time at which arguments pro and con are to be given on the question.

The meeting has been called for 10 a.m. Thursday.

The highway which it is proposed now to make a state route is described in the official circulars sent out as beginning "at Mt. Sterling in Madison-co., thence southerly through Madison and Marion townships in Fayette-co.; thence southeasterly through Perry and Deercreek townships in Pickaway-co.; thence southeasterly through Deerfield and Union townships in Ross-co to the intersection on State route 104 at a point about a mile north of Camp Sherman." The distance covered in this highway is about 29 miles.

Members of the state highway department will be present at the meeting. It is expected that several hundred residents and property owners of the road will also be present.

HIT BY STEEL

Guard J. R. Montgomery rushed from his position at a corner tower and he was slugged, the men using a heavy piece of steel. In the fight which ensued on top of the wide prison walls and in the glare of huge searchlights Brookner was hit by a .38 calibre "dum-dum" bullet.

The men had grabbed the shotgun of Guard Montgomery and they exchanged shots with two guards, whose posts were on the ground inside the walls.

Montgomery was beaten into unconsciousness.

A rope, which apparently had been made from bed clothing, was dropped to the outside and the men dropped down this to freedom.

Guy Tennent, 32, of Cuyahoga-co and Will Miller, 20, of Lawrence-co., are the two convicts who escaped and were at large at 8:30 o'clock this morning. Tennent was serving 10 to 25 years for robbery, having been admitted to the pen July 1, 1925. Miller was serving a like term which he began June 24, 1928.

Another convict, the cellmate of the trio refused to participate in the break. He is John Kelly, of Meigs-co., who is serving a 7-to-15-year term for burglary. Kelly escaped from the Junction City Brick plant on Dec. 14, 1928, but he was returned to the institution on Aug. 9. He apparently did not wish to take a chance. True to the prisoners' "code," he refused to talk to prison officials today.

The escape was apparently well planned. After sawing their way from the cell block, the men scaled the wall, where Guard Montgomery was posted.

They beat him into unconsciousness with some blunt instrument and left him lying for dead. Several stitches were required to close his wounds and he did not regain consciousness for several hours.

The fleeing convicts grabbed the guard's shotguns and exchanged shots with other guards as they dropped over the wall to freedom.

A long rope, which apparently had been made from mattress covering and bedding, was found hanging down the wall.

The fight and subsequent escape took place on top of the prison where a wide walk for guards is located.

It had a stage setting. The huge searchlights which light up the walls were playing on the guard and men as they struggled atop the walls.

Warden P. E. Thomas, whose residence is in the penitentiary, was awakened by the shot and subsequent alarm. He was on the scene in a few minutes and directed the search which was immediately begun.

A riot call was sent in to local police and every road leading from the city is under guard. Railroads have been notified and their detectives are on the lookout.

Rife Addresses Students On Two Voting Methods-Hold Mock Election

S. T. Rife delivered an informal address Monday morning on Voting, at the regular weekly chapel at the high school. Apropos of election day Tuesday, his topic selection was of great interest to the students, although they cannot vote.

Among the subjects mentioned by Mr. Rife were the different methods of voting, the Australian system and the office ballot system. The talk was entirely non-partisan, and at the finish, the vote for the city officials was taken, the results of which have not yet been made known.

Mr. Rife said that it is supposed to be a known fact that the women voters make less mistakes than the men on the ballots. He expressed the opinion that this was probably because they were new, and took the time to learn the proper method, while the men taking their heritage as matter of fact, fell in with less interest and knowledge of how to vote.

The chapel opened by singing, led by Miss Helen Wittich, followed by prayer conducted by Principal E. I. Gephart.

A jury in common pleas court after two hours deliberation Saturday found Mose Rutter guilty of burglary and larceny by stealing chickens from O. B. Armstrong. Sentence has not yet been passed.

The Rutter case started on Wednesday and after more than 30 witnesses had been called the jury was given the case at 11:30 a. m. Saturday. Three venues of jurors were called before a jury suitable to both sides could be obtained.

CANTONIAN TO BE SENATOR?

Single Out Roscoe McCulloch
As Theodore E.
Burton's Successor.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4.—(INS)—Roscoe C. McCulloch of Canton, member of the State Utility commission and former congressman, was singled out by political observers here today as the likely choice to fill the senatorial vacancy which was left by the death of Senator Theodore E. Burton.

Governor Myers V. Cooper, who came here to dedicate the new Cleveland Hungarian Young Men's and Ladies' society building, declined to comment upon newspaper deductions, but it was learned from sources close to the governor that Colonel Carmi A. Thompson, Cleveland's favorite protegee for the appointment, has been virtually eliminated, leaving the post open for McCulloch.

Governor Cooper expressed interest in the "newspaper deductions," which have narrowed the field down to Thompson and McCulloch.

"Wasn't Fredrickson (Charles R. Fredrickson of Coshocton) included?" he queried.

It is generally believed, however, that McCulloch will be appointed with Fredrickson a possibility if, at the last minute, McCulloch is rejected.

MANY HEAR FIVE SPIRITUAL SINGERS

The Presbyterian church and Sunday school rooms were filled Sunday night by a crowd who enjoyed a most entertaining program of negro spirituals sung by five girls from Coulter Memorial Academy at Cheraw, S. C.

More than 60 members of the Presbyterian church at Amanda were present at the program, their church closing for the event. The Rev. George R. Brown, of the church at Amanda was at one time superintendent of a similar school located in South Carolina.

He spoke briefly and with interest of his experience in the school. His descriptions laid a graphic background for the evening's program for the colored girls striving from the worst part of the United States, for an education, to make a living.

Among the songs they sang were "Deep River," "Little Black Sheep," "God's Heaven," "Standing in Need of Prayer," and "Swing Low Sweet Chariot."

By request they also sang their school song. The collection is used to pay their traveling expenses, and the remainder for the local school.

They will broadcast Thursday at 11 a. m., over station WAU, Columbus.

SEEN IN N. & W. TRACKS NEAR DORNEY STOP

Authorities Think Man Is One
Ordered From Streets
Here Saturday.

The almost unidentifiable remains of a man said to be between 23 and 30 years of age are being held at the funeral home of Mader and Ebert where they were taken early Sunday after they had been found in the right-of-way of the Norfolk and Western railroad tracks at Dorney station, five miles east of Circleville.

The man's features are totally destroyed, only a small portion of the side of face being possible to identify.

Parts of the body were seen lying along the track by men on a freight train which passed the scene. They notified the dispatcher who in turn notified Coroner C. E. Bowers that something that looked like the remains of a man were in the tracks at Dorney.

An ambulance was called which went as near as it could to the scene. It was impossible for the ambulance to reach the spot, so a hand car manned by trainmen was called. No clothes were left on the different parts of the body which were found strewn along the right-of-way for a distance of 200 feet.

HAD BEEN SEEN
It was learned that this man might have been the same man who was ordered by police to leave town Saturday evening when he was found intoxicated in the streets.

The man was later seen at the traction office of the Scioto Valley and boarded a Chillicothe bound car at 8:38 p.m.

He was hailed by a point near Dorney where the conductor, who he couldn't learn where the man wanted to go to, asked him to leave the car.

The man wore a light cap, a silk blue striped shirt, E. V. D. underwear, a grey sweater, blue trousers, and tan oxfords. He is thought to have weighed about 170 pounds.

His teeth which were found scattered about the scene showed no fillings. He had sandy hair.

The greater part of the remains were found in the westbound tracks. Trainmen said the body had probably been passed over at least six times, by five freight trains and one passenger train which are known to have passed on the west-bound track from 9:30 p.m. Saturday to the time the body was found Sunday at about 6 a.m.

Pickaway-co officials are using every available effort to identify the body, which apparently is not that of an ordinary bum, but someone who is probably known in this vicinity.

Coroner C. E. Bowers rendered a verdict Monday of accidental death.

BENFORD BODY IS NOT YET FOUND

The Scioto river, muddy and out of banks, still holds the mystery of the death of Miss Carrie Benford, who ended her life last Thursday by jumping off the bridge. Since that day almost constant dragging of the river bed has failed to find the body.

Saturday, a member of the police force of Columbus, joined in the search but was no more successful than the others.

Officer William McCrady was busy Monday having a drag net made that would extend across the river, in hopes that the body may be brought to the surface. It is the opinion of many that the body is caught on the bottom by underbrush.

CIRCLEVILLE MAN SURPRISED AT RESULTS OF SPINAGO

Glorious Health In Store For Everyone If They Follow the Advice of James Eggers.

"After taking two bottles of Spinago, I was surely surprised at the wonderful results obtained." So spoke Mr. James Eggers who is employed by Sturm & Dillard and resides in Circleville at 227 E. Mound St., when he came into the Mykrantz Pharmacy, the other day.

Mr. Eggers is not alone in his praise for this master medicine. Every day many residents of Circleville and neighboring towns call at the Spinago store—the Mykrantz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St. to tell of new wonders worked and lost health regained by its use. Mr. Eggers went on to say:

JAMES EGGERS.

"For many years I suffered untold misery arising from stomach trouble and constipation. Bloating and gas after every meal made eating very unpleasant. Terrible pains, centered in the pit of my stomach. Faulty elimination of waste materials from my body caused me to lose all my pep and energy. You can imagine how little enjoyment I got out of life. One by one other remedies were tried but with no relief. Then came the happy day when Mr. James Marshall told me of the benefits his wife had derived from Spinago. Although a little skeptical, I tried it and surely was surprised at the results obtained. No more stomach trouble now, no more gas and bloating. I have a wonderful appetite, can eat anything without fear and I enjoy my meals. My bowels have been perfectly regulated and my system is kept thoroughly cleansed. My old time pep and energy have returned and I now enjoy life to the utmost. It is wonderful to think that such a tonic as Spinago is available to all who suffer from my former ailments and I am sure that if others will take my advice the same glorious health and happiness is in store for them."

And Spinago can accomplish such feats as the above simply because it is a practical tonic. Besides concentrated Spinach, the medical value of which is known by everyone, it contains an assortment of well known roots, herbs and barks. Its composition is the reason why the most stubborn and chronic cases of indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, neuritis, loss of weight or energy, liver and kidney complaints and kindred ailments cannot stand up against the powerful action of Spinago.

Is it not wise to profit from the experience of others? Follow the crowds to the Mykrantz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St., Circleville, and try a bottle of Spinago on an absolute money back guarantee.—Adv.

SIX NATIONAL LEADERS FALL IN GRID CONTESTS

Dartmouth, Southern California, Missouri, Illinois, Alabama, and Colorado College Topped From Lofty Heights In Week-end of Great Football—Northwestern Takes Light From Zuppke.

By DAVID J. WALSH

(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Peace reigned again today along the embattled "front" of intercollegiate football but, as the peace of Versailles made a laundry ticket out of the map of Europe, so did this armistice make for altered values and proportions at sharp variance with those that had been held previous to Saturday. Dartmouth, for one thing, no longer was one of the right-of-might teams of the east. Southern California, for another, did not rule the coast, as before. Missouri was off the top perch in the Big Six; Illinois practically was eliminated from further defense of its Big Ten title; much the same thing had happened to Alabama down south and Colorado College no longer was a front-rank contender in the Rocky Mountain lists.

MANY CHANGES
Briefly, of all the important developments of Saturday, these were the most far-reaching:

California, supposed to be sub-normal, beat Southern California, supposed to be great, by 15 to 7; Dartmouth, reckoned as one of the best, lost to Yale, 16 to 12, on an intercepted forward pass that never should have been thrown; Kansas Aggies intercepted another of these and probably beat Missouri out of all chance for the Big Six championship, 7 to 6; Southern Methodist and Texas played a scoreless tie, leaving the southwest without a nominal leader; Northwestern took the play away from Illinois from the opening whistle and won by the margin of a touchdown; Marquette outplayed the supposedly fool-proof Detroit outfit but, got no better than a 6 to 6 tie and Colorado College lost to Utah Aggies, leaving the University of Utah in full charge of the Rocky Mountain section.

Notre Dame's 26 to 6 victory over Georgia Tech down in Atlanta would have headed this list except for one thing; it isn't important when Notre Dame wins; only when it loses. This ball team is going through the fanciest schedule of years as though they were playing Upsala, Ypsilanti, Wofford and St. Viator. They must be a little better than the best or else the rest of them are far from good.

Notre Dame, of course, has a chattel mortgage on middle western supremacy with only the Big Ten leaders, Minnesota and Purdue, left to argue about it. This trio remained undefeated over the week-end, the Gophers again looking like a real ball club against Indiana and Purdue beating Wisconsin by two touchdowns. Ohio State still has a figurative chance in the conference but its 18 to 2

"A GODSEND For My Stomach Trouble"

Mrs. Crouse's letter is so grateful and enthusiastic that we want all stomach sufferers to read her experience through ACIDINE, marvelous digestant and anti-acid. Read her letter:

"Health Laboratories, Inc., Pittsburgh, Pa.
"Just a few lines to tell you that your wonderful ACIDINE has surely brought me back my health as I had been in a terrible state for years with my stomach. I had indigestion so bad that every time I would eat I had such terrible pain in my stomach that I thought I would surely die. I want you to know that ACIDINE was a Godsend to me."

"Before taking ACIDINE I had been to a dozen doctors. They would give me something but nothing would relieve me. I nearly went crazy. But now—well, it is another story—thanks to your ACIDINE."

"I can eat, sleep and enjoy life again. I take ACIDINE after every meal and am going to keep it in my home always. Your ACIDINE has saved my life and brought me back to health."

defeat by Pittsburgh made the Buckeyes looked none to plausible for the rest of the schedule.

PITT LEADER

However, Pitt may be so good that it can beat them all. It stands alone as the eastern leader, barring minor contention from Boston College, Fordham, Villanova, W. and J. Western Maryland and Davis-Elkins, also undefeated but hardly qualifying for number one ranking. Cornell, in fact, is Pitt's real threat, the Ithacans having maintained a clear title by beating Columbia. They almost had to take a micro-meter to save off a last-minute touchdown that either would have tied or beaten Cornell, however.

On the coast, California is the new king. It virtually beat the Trojans in the first half by Lom's 80-yard run from punt formation and apparently earned the decision. The Bears now can win the title by winning from Stanford. If they don't, it will end in a triangular tie. At that, St. Mary's, having played a scoreless tie with California, still has the arguing concession out that way, strictly on a sectional basis.

In the south, Tennessee and Tulane continued to dominate the conference, although Vanderbilt remained undefeated. Vandy's defeat of Alabama while Tech was losing to Notre Dame and Florida to Harvard made the south look none too good, by the way. This chain of circumstances added to the prestige of the east, middle west and Big Ten, since Vandy previously, had been beaten by Minnesota. However, Tennessee, which beat Auburn easily, and Tulane, which did much the same with Georgia on Friday, still were asking no favors from anybody.

Missouri's split-second defeat by the Aggies, coupled with Nebraska's come-back in the second period to win convincingly from Kansas, left the Huskers racing toward a championship in the Big Six. However, they haven't posted the numbers on that one yet.

Dartmouth may still come back in the east, many holding that Yale simply was lucky. This is failing to give due credit to a team that outplayed its rival for 2-1-2 periods, although it must be admitted that Dartmouth's fatal pass was a sap play with the game won and five minutes to go. There was no excuse necessary for Princeton, however. Chicago and Van Nice simply were too much for the Tiger, who is having a very maulin year of it. Nor did Pennsylvania have to apologize for beating the Navy. It won that game on its merits, as much as did California, Northwestern, Vanderbilt and Penn State against U. S. C., Illinois, Alabama and Syracuse respectively, the Orange being beaten 6 to 4.

WILD CATS TO MEET O. S. U.

Two Teams Tangle For Seventh Time With State Beaten But Once.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4.—Ohio State, so far undefeated in Big Ten competition, will meet Northwestern here Saturday in a game which means much to both elevens and which will have considerable bearing on the 1929 Big Ten race. Should the Ohioans take the Wildcats into camp, they will go into their final Western conference game with Illinois two weeks hence with a clean slate. Like the Illini, however, the Buckeyes have one tie game to blot that record in the Big Ten.

The game will be the fourth conference fray of the season for the Buckeyes and their fifth hard game in as many Saturdays. Starting on Oct. 12, they have met Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Pittsburgh and Northwestern in a row. They will get a breathing spell next week when Kenyon comes here for the next to the last game of the season.

This week's fray will be the eighth in history between Ohio State and Northwestern. Six of the seven previous contests have been won by the Buckeyes and, in fact, Northwestern elevens have crossed the Ohio State goal line in only one game in all that time. The rivalry goes back to 1913, the year the Ohioans entered the Big Ten, and was continued for five successive years. The series was interrupted during the war, but was resumed two seasons ago. The impending game is the third in the present series of five arranged in 1926.

The record follows:
1913—Ohio State, 58; Northwestern, 0.
1914—Ohio State, 27; Northwestern, 0.
1915—Ohio State, 34; Northwestern, 0.
1916—Ohio State, 23; Northwestern, 3.
1917—Ohio State, 40; Northwestern, 0.
1927—Ohio State, 13; Northwestern, 19.
1928—Ohio State, 10; Northwestern, 0.

Over only one other team in the Western conference does Ohio State hold such a superiority. Purdue, in five games since 1919, has never been able to score on an Ohio State squad. Saturday's melee is expected to attract a throng second only to the Illinois game which will ring down the curtain here Nov. 23.

Cosmopolitan Island

Originally the immigration base, Ellis Island, covered an area of a little more than three acres, but it has been added to from time to time until at present it comprises an area of 21 acres. Much of the material used to enlarge it came from foreign countries, as ballast in ships. It is said that the island includes earth from practically every seaboard country in Europe.

THE AGE-OLD PASTIME

Although in the downtown districts of our cities the sidewalks are still crowded with pedestrians, it is probably true that walking has become an obsolete pastime in America. The rushing in and out of stores in the shopping districts isn't walking anyway, in the opinion of lovers of that form of physical exercise.

We have lost the feeling of leisure which in former days was so conducive to walking. Even in our motoring we seem to be possessed of the idea that we must hurry to get somewhere, although we may have no particular destination in mind.

Obviously the automobile does not permit of sauntering. When the road is good, there comes the irresistible impulse to make the most of it, which to nearly all drivers means anywhere from 35 to 60 miles an hour. And consequently there is lacking the opportunity for quiet enjoyment of the passing landscape; and lacking too is the inducement for reflection and restful meditation which walking, either by one's self or with agreeable companions, makes almost inevitable. In its own way motoring has its pleasures, and on the whole they are no less than those of walking. And perhaps in the stress of modern life it is only natural that we should have taken to the thrill-producing form of exercise.

THE CARNEGIE REPORT

Although a new Carnegie never went to college and has been dead some years his Foundation for Advancement of Teaching seems to have kicked up quite a fuss in the higher circles of learning. The Carnegie Foundation report scoring universities and colleges for overemphasizing football and athletics and for practically subsidizing sports will be applauded by many. Chief Justice Taft in an article in a current magazine makes much the same charges. Many other thoughtful men have deplored college athletics as carried on in the last decade.

There is no doubt merit to their protest but somehow it seems there is another side. College football is a highly colorful spectacle and it does seem that in the long run a drab world is not the worse for it. Also it would seem that many youths who would not attend college otherwise are drawn there by the glamor of athletics. Physical contests should do them no harm and if college atmosphere does them no good it is hard to see where it would be more beneficial without athletics.

A HOUSE DIVIDED

Blue Blood And Red

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER LI

NOT consciously did they draw closer together until their shoulders touched—it came about as though by some inherent magnetic attraction that was a force more powerful than will power, as potent as Youth itself.

An instant remained in which it would have been possible for Marian to draw back, but there was a tremor running through her—through both of them—that nullified all thought-out intentions. Under the sway of this delicious intoxication she felt her arm steal around her, curling with tender pressure until, with a weary sigh, and with a surrendering movement that was all her own, she leaned into his arms with her face uplifted. As his head bent over hers—as it had once before—their lips yielded together.

In one tempestuous moment she realized that this was no mere tormenting delight of sensation—only love could so scatter and confuse all her previous ideas of conduct. Only the man named by Destiny for her mate could blot out all her concern with the rest of life and release these wild currents of surrender in her blood.

She allowed herself to be pressed more tightly in his arms, relaxing with a heedless acquiescence. Just for one great, free moment she remained this way and then, half freeing herself from his embrace, she looked up at him, smiling mysteriously.

He kissed her and there was utter freedom and willingness in her response. At last she leaned her head back on his shoulder with a nestling movement for comfort, now that the first exaltation ebbed into peacefulness.

"You do love me, don't you?" she whispered.

"So much that my head and my heart are both swimming. Do you remember when I first saw you? Well, I loved you from that instant and it grows and grows with every passing second. Nobody ever loved a girl as much as I love you."

"I'm glad—I'm glad—"

Again and again she was locked in his arms while kisses rained on her lips. Then again she spoke: "Eddie, dear, how can we ever part after this?"

"I can't bear to think of it," he murmured.

"Nor I. It couldn't be—life isn't that cruel—that we will have to give each other up. I wouldn't want to live if anybody came between us."

"When did you first love me?" he asked, in awe.

"I think I knew it practically at the start. It was all there from the beginning but it was locked up—like a flower in the bud. There could never have been anyone else for me except you, dear."

"And I was such a dumb-bell that I couldn't believe it!" he declared. "I thought that the odds were a thousand to one against me—I can't believe yet that you love me. It's too wonderful to be true."

Her lips pressed against his for answer.

"How impractical you are!" she said, with a smile of feminine wisdom. "Where were your eyes—couldn't you see?"

"I was blind and when I look into the future and realize what I'm up against—on the outside—I'm more in the dark than ever."

With a snuggling movement she drew even closer to him. "I don't want to worry you, dear—I don't even want to think."

Love, as they found it, was in this first dawning of its true realization as excitingly unreal as a fairyland dream. With the first flash of its delight they were happy as children are, and as innocent in the expression of their feelings as though Marian had never dreamed of the behavior of the new jazz generation. And this, too, despite the fact that Eddie had come up from the hectic world of wickedness and temptation.

They lingered on, reveling in the luminous delight that pulsed around them, marveling at the miracle of love and the fate that had so strangely brought them together. Time after time they had to tell each other of their wonderful love, of the other's thrilling and lovely power. No other people, they were sure, had ever loved so sincerely, so bewilderingly with heavenly delight.

The moon rose toward its zenith and the whole world around them glowed with the gentle light that flooded all around them.

Yet enchantment is so fragile that the hard facts of life have a way of penetrating its fragile fabric even as silvered minutes fly.

"I think I ought to tell you everything about the girl who came down here to see me from New York," he said, suddenly.

In his arms, Marian shuddered slightly.

"I suppose it would be better—but I dread to hear about it."

"It isn't so bad, after all," he said, trying to speak with surety. "A long time ago I thought I had only kid stuff. I didn't dream that you even existed then, dear. Now, I've been a few kisses and some wild talk—but nothing else. She's not a tall like the kind of girl you are—she's a real beauty. She got a crazy idea she was really in love with me. She found out where I was and came down here."

"Did you tell her about me?" Marian asked.

"I told her all about you—and tried to convince her she ought to go back. But she's got the nut idea in her brain that she wants to marry me, and she's going to stick around in the county seat for a while to see what might happen."

"How awful!"

"Just one of those things—a girl with a long, long heart and a wrong slant. But at that, we're not bad-hearted. It's just a delusion she has—but it almost wrecked my life."

"Are you sure you never really loved her?"

"Never!"

"Well, it's too bad—but, after all, it's such a tiny obstacle in our path—ain't it, dear? I know you're telling me the truth, and I feel sorry for the poor girl. But what does it matter—what can it matter?"

Eddie felt now, slowly, the return of his old despondency.

"It matters terribly—when your father forbids me to see you and practically threatens to shoot me if I ever look at you."

But there was an elevation of the spirit about Marian that refused to recognize any such menace.

"That doesn't matter really at all," she declared.

"Maybe—but I don't want him taking a shot at me all the same. I mean it doesn't matter what he thinks. Nobody—not even my own father or mother—has the right to spoil my life. I'll marry you, Eddie, if they never spoke to me again."

Suddenly, like a slow descending weight, as heavy as the universe itself, he realized the awesome responsibility that rested upon his shoulders. Love was vastly more than a thing of kisses—it meant the taking charge of her whole heart, her whole life. To realize that Marian Thorne had been able, so courageously, to cut herself off from everything she had always known and risk her very existence upon the strength of his heart gave Eddie Regan a soberness that filled him with a grave delight.

DR. COPELAND SAYS—DON'T ENCROACH ON HEART'S REST HOURS

The "Usual Expectancy of Life" Can Be Shortened or Lengthened, Says Authority, Depending Much on How You Live and Treat Your Heart.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MOST OF US fail to recognize the human body as a complicated machine. Yet this is what it is.

You have an engine in your automobile, in your boat or in any piece of machinery. Unless this engine makes a certain number of revolutions a minute your car or boat will stop. If you force it too hard or try to run a greater speed than it is capable of, it will sputter, kick, knock or come to a standstill. This is so of the human machine.

There is what we call the "usual expectancy of life." Whether this is shortened or lengthened is, in a large measure, entirely within your own control. If you work all day and dissipate half the night, you cannot expect to live as long as you would with frequent periods of rest. I am not preaching, nor recommending, do not try to run a night in a day and wear yourself out. Come home rested. Many people I fear, some home more fatigued than when they went away.

Take as good care of your heart as of your automobile and you will live long to enjoy it. That is what common sense tells you.

DR. COPELAND

The heart has to work under normal conditions the heart rests one-tenth of a second after each beat. This short rest period makes it possible to store up sufficient energy for its contraction period. Walking, running, tennis and other sports make the heart beat faster, with shorter rest periods in consequence.

Everyone should be interested in the heart. Take good care of it. When you go on vacation have a good time, enjoy yourself to the utmost. But, even though it is a vacation, do not try to run a night in a day and wear yourself out.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

If Joan Crawford had continued to average the same number of steps daily for four months that she used the first two weeks during the filming of her first starring picture, "Our Modern Maidens," which comes to the Cliftona Monday and Tuesday with a synchronized sound score, she would have exercised the same energy necessary in dancing from Los Angeles to Chicago.

For this popular Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, famous for her dancing both on the stage and in pictures, danced practically every day for five weeks, having spent three weeks training for a specialty number seen in her latest picture. Several different dances were executed during this period.

The old, but still popular "Black Bottom" and the "Charleston" contributed several thousand steps to the possible marathon record. Many of the steps were earned in ballroom dancing during "rest periods" between scenes, when the set musician played especially for the star.

The story is a filmization of ultra-modern youth written by Josephine Lovitt, author of "Our Dancing Daughters." Jack Conway directed. The supporting cast includes Rod La Rocque, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Anita Page, Edward Nugent, Josephine Dunn, Albert Grant and others.

AT THE MET

"Close Harmony" proved to be aptly named at the Met theatre last night when Buddy Rogers and Nancy Carroll, popular screen lovers, appeared in a peppy, zesty Paramount production in which the "red hot" music of the jazz age formed the medium for a fine presentation of their musical and dramatic talents. It appears Monday and Tuesday.

The play, an adaptation from the original story of the same name by Elsie Janis and Gene Markey, is a portrayal of the lives and loves of those who gain their livelihood behind the footlights on the vivid stage of the big cinema palaces.

Buddy is the ambitious leader of a jazz orchestra, and Nancy is the headlined song and dance girl of the theatre where Buddy and his musicians get their chance. Men and comedy alike are furnished by Jack Oakie and Richard "Skeets" Gallagher as a song and dance team, and by Harry Green as the high-pressure manager of the theatre.

WEDDING DINNER AT BOGGS HOTEL

A wedding dinner for 18 guests, at the Boggs hotel Saturday noon, followed the wedding at 10 o'clock in Portsmouth of Miss Bess M. True and Mr. George W. Tatman, both of Portsmouth. The bridegroom is the brother of Mrs. Harry Sheets a former resident of this city. Mr. Sheets at one time chief of police of Circleville and sheriff of Pickaway-co, and Mrs. Sheets were among the guests at the wedding in Portsmouth and at the dinner here at the Boggs.

The tables were set in the private dining room at the Boggs, and were handsomely appointed with old silver, crystal and china and with quaint wedding favors. The table decorations were chrysanthemums and pink roses. The wedding luncheon of four courses was served at one o'clock.

The Portsmouth wedding was staged in the First Christian church Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ada True and Mr. Tatman is the son of Mr. Joseph Tatman of Portsmouth.

The impressive double ring service was read by Rev. Haily C. Burkhardt. There were about 100 relatives and intimate friends present. Miss Marjorie Gerlach presided at the piano and just before the entrance of the bride party played, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and, during the ceremony of vows, she played "Oh, Promise Me." The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was the processional march and Mendelssohn's was played for the recessional.

Mrs. Herbert Jantz, of Cincinnati, served as matron of honor and Mr. Jantz was the best man. The bride and her attendant entered from the east door of the church, both walking alone. They were met at the altar by the bridegroom, his best man, and officiating minister.

The bride, who is a very attractive young woman, was lovely in an ensemble of Vera Blue felt crepe with an irregular hemline. Her hat and footwear were of black and she carried an arm bouquet of Madame Butterflies roses.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride party and immediate relatives motored to Circleville and after the luncheon they continued their wedding journey to the northern part of the state. After Nov. 16, they will be at home to their friends in the residence of the bride's mother.

For her going-away costume the bride wore an ensemble of brown tweed with accessories to match.

Mr. Tatman is one of the progressive young business men of Portsmouth, being vice president of the Williams Bros. Tire Co., Sixth and Gay-sts. His bride has been last purchaser at the Selby Shoe Co., for the past few years. Both are popular members of the First Christian church choir and active workers in all the church societies.

Out-of-town relatives at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Alva Tyler and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Jantz of Cincinnati, and Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Reynolds of Wheeling, W. Va.

Irene Bordoni, Vivacious Star, Happy Over Return of Curves

"Who Said Slat-Like Figure Was Beautiful?" Says Famous Stage Beauty

THE return of curves and the passing of the fence rail figure is good news to Irene Bordoni, vivacious stage star and ardent exponent of the well-rounded figure. Standards of beauty that have been applied to women for centuries, she said, have never given place to the self-starved, emaciated form.

"Only in America had the thin form ever been accepted as a standard of beauty," Miss Bordoni says. "In European countries such a figure would be regarded as a monstrosity, something to weep over. And now we are beginning to realize here in my adopted country that charm is best expressed by an abundance of feminine curves and rounded contours."

"It is a source of wonder to me that women have for one moment entertained a thought that the emaciated figure is attractive. Women admit they dress to please men, yet I have never heard one man go on record as admiring the flat-like figure."

Miss Bordoni is glad that theatrical producers have turned thumbs down on the hipless, flat-chested chorus girl. Florence Ziegfeld, George White and other Broadway moguls of musical comedy, she said, are to be commended for their stand which will force frivolous minded young girls who want to become stage stars to give their bodies as much attention as their baby-doll faces.

"Curves and dimples are being sought by all the large producers this season," she continued, "and the slim maiden is in danger of professional ostracism as well as the still greater danger of a physical breakdown."

On the question of health, Miss Bordoni can speak with authority. Her role in her latest success, "Paris," in which she has starred for the past year, is fraught with emotional climaxes. The mental and physical strain while facing an audience permits no relaxation, she said, and in a role of long duration there is an additional strain of effort to prevent the let-down, inevitable after a long successful run.

The United States Navy flying boat completed the first transatlantic flight May 2, 1919. The first non-stop flight by ship was made by the English air force Zepplin R-34 June 2-6, 1919. The first transatlantic flight has just been completed, ten years later, August 22, 1929.

Famous Irish Altar

Irene Bordoni

Only by maintaining the highest degree of health efficiency is it possible to play night after night to an audience increasingly exacting in its demands and for that reason, Miss Bordoni added, she has no sympathy for the food faddists who urge the elimination of sugar and other essential energy building foods from the diet.

Long Way to Forty
Bob Ilyder holds to the opinion that when a woman says that she is still in her thirties, and tells the truth about it, she'll be forty on her next birthday. But we are inclined to believe that her age will be close to the forty-five mark. No body who can't pull the family Bible on her expects any woman to tell the truth about her age.—New Orleans State.

Originator of Income Tax
It is a curious fact that income tax was "invented" by an Oxford don, Dr. Henry Becke, a fellow of Oriel college, who afterwards became dean of Bristol. Becke was professor of modern history at Oxford although his real forte was finance and he frequently assisted Vansittart with the budget during that statesman's long tenure of the chancellorship of the exchequer. Disgruntled taxpayers will learn with grim satisfaction that Doctor Becke came to a sad end. He died in 1886 at Torquay whither he had fled for refuge from the "Belshazzar" riots at the time of the first income bill.—London Times.
